MEXICAN LAWYERS
RAISE QUESTION OF
THE SECOND TERMWANT MORE PAY
AT MARE ISLAND

(By Associated Press)

EDMUND, Tex., March 4.—Mexican constitutional lawyers have been discussing seriously the question of whether President Carranza will have the right to continue as president of Mexico after November 30, 1920, in case the scheduled summer election should not take place or in case the successful candidate should fail to present himself for the oath of office.

Passing sentence between two articles of the constitution of 1917 as pointed out in an article recently published in Exponent of Mexico City.

Article xi regulates the amount of pension that any one who once held the high office of president of the republic shall be held fit for another term. Executive says, quoting a number of legal experts:

But Article xi reads:

In at the beginning of a constitutional presidential term the president should fail to appear, or if he does not already intended to take place by December 1, the person whose term is about to expire shall cease to minister and designate his successor for the president with title of provisional president who person as may be chosen by the majority of the army.

It is argued that Article xi contains no provision that prohibits outgoing president from becoming provisional president by the congress or the army the contingencies specified in the article should occur.

The word of opinion, however, according to Exponent, is that the spirit of that the letter of the constitution as imposed on the constitution in article xi by congressional authority of a person whose term is about to expire.
